INTRODUCTION

Set quietly on 3.27 acres in the Hyalite Foothills of Bozeman, this property offers a rare combination of privacy, usable land, and unobstructed mountain views, just minutes from town. Opportunities like this are increasingly limited and difficult to replicate at any level. Originally built in 1978, the home has undergone a complete, seven-figure transformation. This is not a cosmetic update, but a full structural and spatial reconfiguration designed for modern living, natural light, and long-term functionality. Inside, expanded sightlines and large sliding doors bring the surrounding landscape into the home, creating a seamless indoor-outdoor connection throughout the seasons. The main living area is anchored by a black limestone fireplace beneath vaulted ceilings, balancing scale with warmth. The kitchen is built to perform, featuring Wolf, Viking, and Cove appliances, dual Galley workstations, a walk-in pantry, and custom cabinetry designed for both efficiency and clean design. The main level includes two dedicated offices, supporting a true work-from-home lifestyle. A third primary bedroom, currently used as a gym, features large sliding doors and functions easily as a main-level suite. Upstairs, the owners suite is positioned for privacy, alongside a junior suite and an additional living area with a built-in kitchenette, ideal for guests, extended family, or flexible use. Bathrooms are finished in marble with Restoration Hardware vanities, reinforcing the level of quality throughout. Beyond the home, the property expands into a fully functional compound. A newly constructed oversized four-car garage is complemented by a multizone workshop, greenhouse, sauna, gazebo, and additional utility structures offering space for projects, storage, or future adaptation. Outdoor living is integrated, not added on. A glass-framed, four-season extension with ceiling-mounted heaters creates a year-round gathering space. A sauna, hot tub, and pond introduce moments of privacy and restoration across the landscape, while mature plantings provide natural screening without compromising openness. Every major system, structure, and finish has already been addressed, eliminating the time, cost, and uncertainty most buyers face when improving rural properties. Recreating this property today, with land, construction, and improvements, would require significantly more capital, extended timelines, and complex coordination.

GALLATIN COUNTY

Located in a sweeping valley in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, Gallatin County is the most populated and fastest growing county in scenic southwest Montana. Gallatin Valley has a rich history. Native americans referred to this area as the “Valley of Flowers”. The name seems appropriate because of the great variety of wild flowers found on the mountainsides as well as in the valley. Gallatin Valley derives its name from the Gallatin River, one of the forks of the Missouri river that rises in Yellowstone Park. The Gallatin river, Jefferson river, and Madison river all merge at the town of Three Forks to form the Missouri River. Lewis and Clark named the rivers on their famous expedition to this part of the world in 1805.

There are approximately 1,682,048 acres(2,500 square miles) in Gallatin County including over 16,500 acres in surface water. Approximately 800,000 acres in Gallatin County are owned by the public and managed by several local and national agencies including the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service, National Park Service, Montana Fish Wildlife & Parks, Montana Department of Transportation, Department of Natural Resources & Conservation and various local governments. The U.S. Forest Service is the largest land holder in Gallatin

County, currently managing over 665,000 acres. In addition to the Forest Service, various state departments manage approximately 61,000 acres. The Bureau of Land Management holds just over 9,000 acres and an additional 1,600 acres belongs to local governments. On the southern edge of Gallatin County is Yellowstone National Park. Yellowstone National Park is one of the world’s primary wildlife preserves and has the greatest concentration of geysers and hot springs in America. Yellowstone National Park is 2,219,789 acres in size(Larger than Rhode Island and Delaware combined). Over 97,600 acres of Yellowstone National Park is located within Gallatin County.
